ARCTIC MOVING TO LARGER OAKVILLE LOCATION

London, Ontario – Arctic Snowplows announced today it is moving its facility in Oakville, Ontario, to a larger location within the city on June 1, 2010, to support the company's continued success and growing network of dealers and customers.

Over the past two years, the company has bucked economic trends and experienced close to a 30 per cent growth in sales. Arctic experienced its strongest year in 2009, and continues to see its business prosper this year.

The goal for 2010, says Daniel Armstrong, President of Arctic Snowplows, is to increase Arctic's business by another 20 per cent.

To support the anticipated growth, a move to a new location is necessary, explains Armstrong. "We're moving into a larger facility in Oakville that's almost twice the size of our current space. This new site will help us serve the Greater Toronto Area, as well as northern and eastern Ontario."

Armstrong added, "This facility will allow us to warehouse more product – including our new galvanized snowplows and spreaders."

Since it was founded in 1969, Arctic Snowplows has become Canada's premier manufacturer of snowplows for the light truck market, earning a reputation for design innovation, durability, value pricing, attentive service and the best warranty in the industry.
